Name_____ Class_____ Date_____

1 What would be an appropriate sidebar for a science article about how roller coasters are built?

A Keeping Coasters Safe
B Riding All the Coasters
C Standing Up in Coasters
D Making Coasters Slower

2 To show they are important terms, potential energy and kinetic energy could be printed in bold letters when they are used in an article describing how roller coasters work.

A true
B false

3 If a Scientific American headline reads, "Watch out for falling stars" the story might be about _____.

4 Which of these might be the headline in a news magazine?

5

PREVIEW

Please Sign In or Sign Up to download the printable version of this worksheet

7 ...ities printed in bold and towns printed in fine print.

A true
B false

...between places. These are often in fine print.

A true
B false

0   50   100   150   200 Miles

1 INCH

9 Science textbooks might include _____.

A stories about giants
B questions about traveling
C chapters about inventions
D treasure maps

10 Why do newspapers have headlines?

A to call attention to the content of an article
B to fill up the space around stories
C to share the details of a story
D to remind readers why they should read

ELA
F

Name_____ Class_____ Date_____

1 What would be an appropriate sidebar for a science article about how roller coasters are built?

A Keeping Coasters Safe
B Riding All the Coasters
C Standing Up in Coasters
D Making Coasters Slower

(A)

2 To show they are important terms, potential energy and kinetic energy could be printed in bold letters when they are used in an article describing how roller coasters work.

A true
B false

(A)

3 If a Scientific American headline reads, "Watch out for falling stars" the story might be about _____.

4 Which of these might be the headline in a news magazine?

(C)

5

(B)

7
cities printed in bold and towns printed in fine print.

A true
B false

(A)

between places. These are often in fine print.

A true
B false

0   50   100   150   200 Miles
1 INCH

(A)

9 Science textbooks might include _____.

A stories about giants
B questions about traveling
C chapters about inventions
D treasure maps

(C)

10 Why do newspapers have headlines?

A to call attention to the content of an article
B to fill up the space around stories
C to share the details of a story
D to remind readers why they should read

(A)